SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF
W. C. ALLISON'S
PATENT JOINT
Oil Well Tubing.
This Superior Tubing is furnished with heavy sockets, and is cut with a vanishing screw thread, corresponding exactly with the thread in the socket, so that when screwed up it has a bearing the whole length of the joint and the absence of a deep thread on the tube at the end of the socket obviates the liability to break at that point from the vibration caused by the action of the pump.
Each length and socket is stamped with our trade mark, and is carefully tested before shipment with a hydraulic pressure of 1,200 pounds to the square inch.

The President's Western Trip.

SAN FRANCISCO RECEPTION ARRANGEMENTS.

From the San Francisco Bulletin.

The visit of the President of the United States to the Pacific Coast will be an event of peculiar interest, as marking emphatically our closer relations to the eastern side of the continent. It will be the first visit ever paid by the Chief Magistrate of the Republic to the great region west of the Mississippi Valley. Under no previous administration could the President have come so far west as California without a journey of several weeks' duration, attended by more or less peril and hardship. It is not two years since the completion of the Pacific Railroad made the trip a pleasant excursion, and shortened the distance in time between New York and San Francisco to one week. Before that event California was isolated from the rest of the Union, and was an almost unknown land to the rest of the people at the East. No President thought it justifiable or prudent to come hither, even if he could have spared the time from his public duties. While President Grant is on his journey he can communicate with his Cabinet by telegraph, if necessary, at any station along the road. The car he occupies will be as comfortable and elegant as a parlor suite in one of our best hotels. As he was on this coast many years when he was a simple captain in the army, or a money-seeking adventurer like the rest of our pioneers, he will be able to appreciate and enjoy these changes, and all the improvements that he will find on every hand. He will be welcomed as an early Californian as well as President, and his welcome, in this city at least, will be wholly free from partisanship It is gratifying to see our citizens unite in the arrangements for his reception, as by a common impulse, without reference to political distinctions. The citizens of the metropolis of the Pacific coast ought to honor the officer and ignore the representative. That was the custom of Americans everywhere in olden times, and it is a custom which ought to prevail everywhere and in all times. The true citizen honors himself in paying respect to the head of his national Government.

We hope to see the arrangements for Grant's reception carried out in a liberal spirit, and made every way creditable to our cosmopolitan State.

Fearful Scene in a Theatre.

TWO ACROBATS FALL FROM A TRAPEZ, HEAD FOREMOST, IN THE ORCHESTRA—INTENSE EXCITEMENT IN THE AUDIENCE.

From the Pittsburgh Chronicle, March 23.

A startling and absolutely frightful accident occurred yesterday afternoon at the matinee at the Opera House. Fortunately the accident was not attended by any very serious result, but its possibilities were terrible. Laselle and Millson were performing together on the trapez, suspended high above the orchestra. They were performing a particularly daring feat. Each with an arm clasped about the other, they slid rapidly, heads downward over the bar, intending to catch their feet in the angles formed by the bar and the ropes, and so hang in mid-air In some manner their feet failed to catch in the angles, and the men, clasped in each other's arms, came crashing together, heads downward, upon the floor of the orchestra. As they fell, each uttered a great cry. The excitement in the audience was, of course, intense, the ladies screaming and the men rushing toward the scene of the accident. One lady went into hysterics. It was subsequently ascertained that she was the wife of one of the fallen Mr. Lazelle was on his feet almost instantly, unhurt, but Millson lay helpless and moaning on the floor. It seems that he had fallen on his side with his companion on top of him. The injured man was carried by Mr. Beamer and Mr. Lazelle through the orchestra door to the stage, and in a few moments the stage-manager appeared and announced to the audience that the accident was not serious, Mr Millson only having been stunned. The announcement was received with cheers, and the audience resumed their seats and the performance went on. In a few moments the acrobats came again upon the stage and bowed to the audience, after which they withdrew amidst hearty applause. When the performance was over, Millson stood at the stage door as the audience withdrew. He was looking pale, but was smiling and speaking to his friends. No bones were broken, and so far as known no internal injuries were received. It seems almost miraculous that such an accident should have results of so little seriousness.

Gospel vs. Law.

From the Cincinnati Commercial, March 25.

The neighboring moral town of Camden is just recovering from a grand commotion occasioned by a law suit brought by a saloon-keeper, named Ike McLean, against Rev. Mr. Kennedy, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, C M Rhorer, Postmaster, and Benjamin Williams, a blacksmith, to recover the sum of $125, for an alleged purchase of whiskey valued at that amount. It seems that a fierce war has been waged for some time past by the temperance men of the town on the saloon-keepers, in which the latter usually fared rather badly. McLean opened a place, determined to make money, and to that end sold liquor to all applicants regardless of age, sex or color. He was repeatedly approached by the Rev. Mr. Kennedy, who remonstrated with the godless dispenser of mortality in liquid form, on his wickedness, but all to no avail, until McLean proposed to the pious man that if he would purchase his stock of whisky, valued at $125, he would close up and leave town. This was agreed to by Mr. Kennedy and his supporters, Messrs. Rhorer and Williams, on condition that McLean would immediately renounce his business, join the Church and conduct himself as a man and brother during the remainder of his stay in the town. Assenting to the conditions, McLean at once shut up his place and became one of the most dignified and staid members of Rev. Kennedy's congregation. At the expiration of nine days—that time being mutually agreed upon as a season of probation—McLean presented his bill to the reverend pastor, but was somewhat taken back by that gentleman's refusing to "shell out," or, in other words, to recognize the validity of the contract. McLean at once instituted suit as before stated, and received a judgment against Kennedy & Co., for the full amount of his claim. It has, however, been carried by the defendants to the Court of Appeals at Eaton, and above the entire attention of the sedate Camdenites, who solemnly wag their heads, and with expectant awe look for the majesty of the law to decide whether they shall be a whisky or a gospel-loving community in the days to come.

Hydrate of Chloral.

A writer in Good Health says: "The hydrate of chloral, about which so much has been written during the past year, has now reached the stage of a quack medicine, and, in the hands of designing or ignorant people, is likely to occasion much mischief. It is sold in liquid form as an anodyne, mixed with gum or sugar water, glycerine, or some tincture; and as the strength of the preparation is not given, and it is liable to undergo spontaneous decomposition, the patient can never tell how much of a dose he is taking. A bottle of chloral, put up in the usual style of a popular medicine, when it was sent to us six months ago for examination, has entirely decomposed; and it would be dangerous to use it, as the nature of the products of decomposition are not well understood. We must utter a note of warning that it is never safe to take the hydrate of chloral unless freshly prepared, and upon prescription of a competent physician.

The Rip Van Winkle of the Talmud.

The story of the Rabbi Coniah has been reproduced for the Jewish Messenger, and is chiefly remarkable from its resemblance in one or two particulars to the world-renowned story of Rip Van Winkle, which Washington Irving gave to the world, and which has been revived in the drama by Mr. Joseph Jefferson. The Rabbi was learned above his peers, and a great many reverenced him for his wisdom and erudition. But he perceived not the necessity of that charity and forethought which should induce individuals to make provision for those coming after them, and therefore he received the stern lesson.

An old man was planting a carob-tree, and displayed a heartiness and zeal which seemed to indicate that expected to enjoy the results of his labor. Coniah regarded him with astonishment and a certain degree of contempt. For it is a tradition of the Talmud that a carob-tree does not bear fruit till seventy years after it has been planted.

"Do you expect to eat of the fruit of this tree?" the Rabbi asked, with a shrug of disdain.

"Rabbi," answered the old man meekly, but with dignity, "when I was a little child this field abounded with carob-trees laden with fruit. My father had planted them for me. I plant this tree now for my children."

Coniah turned away murmuring: "For his children. Blind, how blind we are. We live in this world but a brief period, and yet presume to provide for those who will come after us. They must die as well as we. Our existence was not given us merely for this world. Every man ought to consider his heavenly life, and forego all care or interest about the few days that he and others will spend here. What is our lot, or the the lot of our children, is of little account. We are destined for heaven, and that is quite enough."

While he was hesitating in this manner, Coniah lay down upon the ground. Feeling the sensation of hunger he drew forth from his pocket a piece of bread and ate, continuing his reflection. Presently he became drowsy, and fell asleep. He awoke not all that day, nor during the night. The day returned and the night began again, and still he slept. Thus passed many days and nights, during which he awoke not. A wall of stone was erected over him by a miracle, and shut him from the sight of men.

Thus for years he lay incarcerated as in a tomb. Generations passed away, and numerous events occurred to change the aspect of the world. Finally seventy years were accomplished, and the stony sepulchre disappeared, restoring Coniah once more to the light of the day. He awoke as the sun ascended the meridian, and exclaimed:

"Verily, I have slept long. It was a little before the dusk of evening when I lay down, and now the sun is midway in the sky."

He arose and walked to the place where he had reproached the old man who planted the tree for posterity. Behold, it was fully grown, and a boy stood near to it, eating of its fruit. Coniah accosted him

"My young friend, who planted that carob tree?"

"Not I," replied the youth, "for it requires many years for such a tree to mature and yield its fruit. My father declared to me that my grandfather planted it."

Coniah heard this with a fetling of horror.

"There can be no mistake, said he to himself. Here it is that I rebuked the old man, and there I lay down and slept. The tree bears fruit and I have been sleeping for seventy years."

Full of anxiety he directed his footsteps toward the city where he had dwelt. But he soon paused and the familiar footand landmarks had disappeared. The houses had put on an unfamiliar appearance. Everything around him was strange and new.

At length he discovered the way, and he came to the city. A multitude swarmed in the streets. Coniah looked sharply, but no face could he descry that had ever been known to him. Once he had a host of admirers; but now he was not recognized by any one. For him was no welcome, no word of greeting. A terrible sense of isolation came over him. He was alone in the midst of that crowd, as much so as if he had been in the solitude of a desert. Bitter was the anguish of that hour. A faint hope only remained to mitigate the fierceness of his despair.

"No more," said he to himself, "no more have I friends and acquaintances. But my family yet remains to me. With them I may yet find a home, and consolation and peace."

With throbbing heart he hastened to the house where he had dwelt. But as he went along his confidence abated. He could not recognize his home, neither the walls nor the roof. Everything was new. With a feeling of hesitation he entered. Children were at play; their mother aided in their sports, while the father, a hale middle-aged man was at his work. The moment that Coniah was perceived, all were still, and regarded him with apprehension and looks of suspicion. Addressing himself to the man he said:

"Call for me the son of Coniah."

"The son of Coniah!" exclaimed the man in astonishment. "He has long since slept with his fathers."

"Who, then, are you?" Coniah asked.

"I am the grandson of Coniah."

Overjoyed, Coniah extended his arms to embrace him, exclaiming "I am your grandfather!"

But the grandson eluded his caresses, and replied, with great astonishment:

"You my grandfather? No! I never saw you, and I know not."

The distracted Coniah begun to tell the story of his wonderful sleep, and to entreat for the affection of his grandson. But the latter shook his head and answered:

"You may remain here with me and do what you please. But do not ask my love. I have never seen you before and I know you not."

So Coniah remained. But his life was wretched. There was no memory to connect him with his family and endear them to each other. He was in solitude, although surrounded by living persons; for they had never seen him before, and their hearts were not opened toward him. He was never more than a stranger who abode with them.

He visited the elderly men of the city, but no one could recognize him. They remembered the name of Coniah, the great Rabbi, but when he attempted to make himself known they repulsed him angrily, saying:

"You are imposing upon us. Coniah has been dead for many, many years. You cannot be he."

So he wandered about with his terrible sorrow seeking some kinsman or friend to love and comfort him. But it was in vain. He could be received nowhere without a name; and when he insisted upon his own he was scouted as an imposter.

One day he entered into the college where once he had been accustomed to teach and receive honor. To avoid reproach he forebore to mention his name or speak of himself. A learned discussion was going on, and he listened with his old eagerness. As each man argued he would quote Coniah, his rules, his examples, his opinions, as men spoke of one for a long time dead. There sat the living Coniah, and dared not utter a word. It was not intolerable; he wept bitterly, and his cheeks flowed with scalding tears.

When he left the college his anguish was more than he could bear. The changed faces around him, the terrible solitude in the midst of his fellow-men, the absence of every tie between him and them, overpowered him. Falling upon the ground, he turned his face to the sky and cried to the Lord:

"My God, I am deserted. Give me, I implore Thee, the society of men, or let me die. I am alone in the world, O! take me hence to Thee."

His prayer was heard. Weakness came upon him, and in a few days he expired.

Escape from Paris in a Balloon.

In Appleton's Journal, C. F. Wingate describes a balloon journey from Paris undertaken by two New Yorkers (Mr. W. W. Reynolds and Mr. C. W. May), who carried with them a French army officer and an engineer. At the same time M. Gambetta made his escape from Paris in another balloon. Each party was seated in a wicker basket, attached by eight cords to the body of its balloon. The balloons started together, and the passengers carried only a few extra clothes, some food and other necessaries, together with a coop of carrier pigeons, and copies of two addresses, one in German from Victor Hugo, and another in French from Jules Favre, for distribution through the country.

It eight minutes past eleven o'clock in the morning the start was made. The day was clear, and the balloons rose rapidly to a height of eight hundred yards, and was carried by the wind, which was northeast, directly toward the Prussian lines. Paris lay beneath them, spread out like a panorama, so that the public buildings and streets could be easily distinguished. The Prussians, as soon as the balloon approached them, opened fire from several points, with cannon, musketry, and rockets, and for some minutes their missiles whistled through the air in dangerous proximity. The mounted Uhlans also tracked the balloons for some distance along the roads, in expectation that they would have to descend, but they were doomed to disappointment. Gambetta, however, narrowly escaped falling into their hands, and also of destroying his companions. From some cause his engineer lost control of his balloon, and dropped until it was close to the ground. It then soared up at a rapid pace, but, to the horror of Mr. Reynold's party, it rose directly under their balloon, and for a few minutes it seemed as if there must be a fatal collision. The party awaited the result in fear and trembling, but the wind fortunately put an end to their danger by wafting the lower balloon to one side, and the two then passed on in safety together, arising to the heighth of more than a mile.

At this distance the landscape seemed to blend in a confused mass of objects. The roads appeared like white lines, villages seemed to be mere hamlets, while the woods, which had just taken on their autumal tints, looked like a raised velvet carpet. Even with strong glasses, they could scarcely tell whether the people they saw were peasants or soldiers, and it took several minutes for the rolled-up papers and circulars which they threw out to reach the ground. The speed of the balloons could not be estimated while they where high in the air; but, when they descended near to the ground, it was seen that they were going as fast as a railroad train. Though the engineers had not much experience, they succeeded very well in managing the machines. Every little while they would descend near enough to drop written questions to the peasants, asking where they were and the latter would shout out the name of the place.

At two o'clock they all dined. Soon after the balloons parted company. The one which bore Gambetta tried to land at Criel, but found, when close to the ground, that it was over a Prussian camp, and its occupants only escaped capture by throwing over their baggage, carrier pigeons and some of their clothes, and even then did not escape until M. Gambetta had been wounded in the h

CONGRESSIONAL.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 30.

Davis, of Ky., offered a resolution calling the Secretaries of the Treasury, War and Navy to report to the Senate at the next session a schedule of property by citizens, with its estimated value, which has been seized or taken possession of since the 1st of January, 1861, by authority of or in the name of their departments respectively, what disposition was made of said property, the proportions sold, what became of the money therefrom, how much went into the Treasury and how much to individuals, with names and amount to to each, what portion of said property, etc., was delivered to and retained by individuals, with their names. Laid over until to-morrow.

The motion entered some time since by Morrill, of Vt., to reconsider the vote passing Wilson's $100 bounty bill and to carry out the decision of the Supreme Court, was adopted.

Wilson then moved a modification of the bill to give bounty to those who have been disabled by sickness or disability contracted in the service. It would reach about half the cases under the decision of the court and the remainder would have to be provided for hereafter.

Casserly desired time to examine the matter, and upon his request the subject went over without action till to-morrow.

Consideration of Anthony's amendment to the order of business to allow consideration of a bill on the South, passed by the House of Representatives, was resumed.

Davis, of Kentucky, spoke in refutation of the charges of Sherman against the peace and order of the South, particularly his own State. He defended the loyalty and law-abiding character of the people of Kentucky, and enumerated various grievances to which they had been subjected at the hands of the general government, among which was the refusal to make compensation to their owners for slaves enlisted in the army at the beginning of the war, in Kentucky, Maryland and other States. Congress had refused to pay the appropriation of $300 for each slave, and he believed the Senator from Ohio (Sherman) was among those who so voted.

Sherman replied he had been in favor of paying $300 and believed there was a time that a majority of the Senate was in favor of it.

Pomeroy—I would not vote to pay it.

Blair here explained that payment had been prevented by an unauthorized act of Secretary Stanton.

Davis—A more lawless dictator was never in power than that same Secretary of War. If justice had been dealt out to him in his lifetime for his crimes he would have been hung a hundred times for murder and put in the penitentiary ten thousand times for his crimes. [Sensation]

At this point the morning hour expired when it was agreed to take a vote upon the question of Thurman's amendment, requiring that any bill might be received from the House and referred to a committee before action by the Senate. It was voted down, only fourteen Senators rising in the affirmative.

Anthony's resolution was then adopted without division.

Sherman's resolution instructing the Judiciary Committee to bring in a bill to suppress Ku Klux outrages was then proceeded with, and Davis, of Kentucky, whose remarks had been interrupted by the expiration of the morning hour, was awarded the floor. He gave notice that he would present his views at length at a proper time, and would then pay his respects to the Administration, taking authority for all he would say from the historic records of the Administration as made by its own friends.

Wilson said he held in his hands a list of victims of murder and outrage committed in Kentucky in the last month of 1865, and the first ten months of 1866, and to this he invited the attention of Senator Davis and his colleague Stevenson. It appeared in this time there were nineteen murders of freedmen, and 222 cases of freedmen who had been maltreated without being killed. Two white union men in the same time were murdered and four others assaulted with intent to kill. It might be an interesting task for two Senators from Kentucky to attempt to furnish a list of offenders who suffered death or imprisonment for these outrages. Had there been a single case of punishment? The honorable Senators might argue from now till eternity, but they could not obliterate these facts.

Davis replied that many outrages were committed by negroes upon negroes. It was certainly true that such lawlessness had prevailed in Kentucky just after the soldiers of both armies were wandering about plundering and wreaking vengeance, but now comparative quiet prevailed.

Stevenson said the only fault of the people of Kentucky was in refusing to believe in the superiority of the negro race. To show that the Senator from Indiana (Morton) at one time entertained the same views, he read extracts from a speech delivered by him in 1865, opposing negro suffrage as dangerous to the country, holding the negro to be unfit to wield the franchise, and they should undergo a probationary period.

Morton proceeded to read from what he stated, to be an official list of murders and outrages committed in Kentucky.

Stevenson inquired what official list he meant.

Morton replied that it was official record prepared by the Freedmen's Bureau. (Derisive laughter on the Democratic side)

Stevenson—We do not recognize the Freedmen's Bureau as an authority in Kentucky.

Morton—You do not recognize any authority. You do not allow negroes to testify, and if you could succeed in excluding all testimony it would be easy for you to prove that Kentucky is a law-abiding State.

Blair desired Senator Morton to answer candidly one question, whether negroes had not been entrusted with the ballot in order to obtain Republican votes.

Morton replied it was well known reconstruction could not be accomplished on a white basis. The white people of the South would not accept the situation.

Blair (emphatically)—They did accept the situation; they did abolish slavery, and never lifted a hand against the country since, and any one who asserts to the contrary asserts to that which is not true. (General applause in the galleries).

The Chair (Anthony) warned the galleries that a repetition of such demonstration would cause them to be instantly cleared.

Edmunds said he desired to give notice that upon the next occasion of disorderly manifestation in the galleries he should not only insist upon their being cleared but upon the offenders being arrested and punished. It was about time to put a stop to practices which during the last few days had turned the chamber into a beer garden or cook pit.

Morton said he did not wish the galleries interfered with on his account.

Conkling said he would have to object to carrying out the threat of the Senator from Vermont in this case. The same galleries for days had been applauding sentiments identical with those just expressed by the Senator from Missouri. He was opposed to any discrimination in the matter, and thought the Senator from Missouri should not be deprived of the pleasure awarded to other Senators.

The Chair stated if disorder was repeated he would have to direct the Sergeant-at-Arms to enforce the rules.

Morton said he would conclude what he had to say by asking for the reading of an editorial from the Louisville Courier-Journal on the Kentucky Legislature. It was a photograph by a Democratic paper of the Democratic Legislature. The article was read. It in substance declared the Ku Klux in Kentucky informidable in numbers, but were terrible in act. That the Legislature failed to do anything to suppress them, spent their time in whisky and champaigne drinking, smoking cigars and lobbying, and praying that the State may never look upon its like again, etc. Morton explained in reply to Thurman that he did not mean to say lawlessness was universal among the Democratic party of Kentucky. He admitted that the State Governor, now Senator Stevenson, and two Democratic Judges had done their duty, as also one Democratic paper—the Louisville Courier-Journal—out of forty published in the State, but they were unable to influence the Democratic party of the State.

Pool obtained the floor, and at 5 o'clock, after a brief executive session, the Senate adjourned.

House.

On motion of Wilson, of Indiana, the House took up and passed the Senate bill granting Phoebe Sofield a pension of eighty dollars a month from January, 1870, she being at that time 100 years old and the widow of a Revolutionary soldier.

On motion of Kendall the House took up and passed the Senate bill authorizing and requesting the President of the United States to appoint a board of three commissioners, two of whom shall be officers of engineers of the army, and one mining or civil engineer, to examine and report on the Sutro tunnel, in the State of Nevada.

The House proceeded to the consideration of the bill reported from the Special Committee. Beck said this was not the bill he thought at one time of introducing. The bill of the gentleman from Massachusetts proposed to deal vengeance to the States of the South and Kentucky. This bill was bad enough, but it had the merit of audacity and sought to reach all States and all people. The bantling of the President, after a barbarous incubation, had been hatched and was now before them to destroy the rights of the States and people and put into the hands of the President, unless the bill be killed here, omnipotent power everywhere. This bill would make the President a dictator to destroy the liberties of the people, and those who aided and abetted the bill would become more odious than the Ku Klux desperados of the South. The gentleman from Massachusetts (Butler) said the bill met with the approval of a majority of the Republicans of the House.

Dawes—My colleague did so.

Beck—It may be a lie. [Nobody contradicted him.] I want that bill printed, circulated and accompanied with the remark of Gen. Butler that a majority of the Republicans of the House approved it. It failed to become a law only because of the opposition of the Democrats.

Dawes—No man on this or the other side is authorized to say a majority of the Republicans of this House are in favor of the bill. There was no record, no vote, no such private or public expression of opinion.

Beck—I do not say it is so, but it was so announced by Gen. Butler, who said the caucus agreed to stand by his bill. I will let the gentleman and his colleague settle the matter between them. In the course of his remarks he said he would protect citizens everywhere without reference to race, color or previous condition. The Democracy would do the same thing, and when they failed to do so he would no longer belong to that party, but would not subvert the constitution of the country and make the President dictator. The pretext for the passage of this bill was to afford an excuse for the cry of war, murder and Ku Klux, so as to divert the people from thinking of the extravagance of the mass of legislation, and bond, land and railroad swindles.

Blair, of Michigan, said that in his opinion the House ought to have adjourned directly after it organized. He wished the laws, as they stood, might be thoroughly tested before they entered upon new and untried fields of legislation. Many and broad powers had been granted to the President for the preservation of order in the late insurrectionary States, and why pile statute upon statute to be unused. His conviction was it was not law that was wanted in the South, but it was the execution of the law, and the law had been confided to another branch of the Government. That there are great disorders in the South there is no doubt. Ku Klux was not a new institution. It was only a little more devilish than in times past. It was another phase of lynch law, which prevailed in the South ever since he could remember. The act of May 18, 1870, known as the enforcement act, seemed to be made to meet the existing condition of affairs. This, he repeated, appeared to be broad, clear and definite enough to meet all the acts of lawless bands and conspirators. The strong arm of the law ought to be applied to suppress all conspirators and obstructions to the law. In reply to Beck, he said that the gentleman from Kentucky had declared his readiness to put down offenders in the most severe manner. They had heard enough of that from the time the rebellion begun until this hour. Congress was full of such patriots. They would put down disorder and abuses in the country, but they could not find an hour to do so. They would always doubt the evidence of the existence of lawlessness, and when they found it out would point to the constitution. However great the evil, they were unable to find power to interfere. If the gentleman from Kentucky was serious in denouncing the President as an usurper, let him go and sot down and talk with the President five minutes and if then the gentleman comes away thinking the President is a Napoleon who is preparing his guns to batter down the defences of our liberty and make himself on imperial despot, then he (Blair) should be much disappointed. All the gentleman's talk was exceedingly idle. If he had been on the stump in Kentucky, haranguing the mob who assaulted the colored agent of the postoffice, no doubt he would have been applauded. All the clamor made was for mere political effect to help the Democratic party into power.

Fernando Wood was the next speaker. He discussed the bill at great length, denounced it as making the President a lawless dictator, responsible to no one, and said there was no evidence in existence of any widespread opposition to law and order, and as no evidence of the falsehood of alleged Ku Klux outrages as general in the South, referred to the fact of a large increase of staple productions in that section over previous years. Congress had higher duties to perform than agitate subjects like this. The duty of Congress is to provide a reduction of taxation and public expenditure, to abolish sinecure offices, restore the currency to a specie basis, reduce the army to a peace footing, to provide against the accumulation and retention of large sums of money in the public treasury, to prevent the purchase and sale of public credit by the Secretary of the Treasury at his own option, to bring the President and his Cabinet advisers under authority of law, making them obedient to their provision and alike with others subject to penalties, to restore to the Southern States and the people peace, prosperity and contentment, only to be accomplished by a cessation of vindictive legislation and military interference, and the recognition of their equal rights, in-that the bill of General Butler is a worse one than this. He did not think it so bad a bill, insomuch as Butler's bill deprived only Southern people of their rights and liberties under the constitution, while this bill, because of alleged outrages in two or three Southern States, put it in the power of the President to deprive all innocent people, North and West, of the habeas corpus and subject them all to martial law at his pleasure and caprice

Maynard read an article from the Chattanooga Times of March 3d, 1871, which, after alluding to the remarks of Senator Thurman, to the effect that the Ku Klux ought to be put down, makes the following comment, to which Maynard called attention: Now, no person attempts to deny that crimes and outrages are committed in the South by organized bodies of masked marauders, and some belong to a secret political society called "Ku Klux." Maynard said this admission came from a friend of a gentleman on the other side.

Eldridge asked the gentleman to read the remaining part of the article. The gentleman knew that what he read did not give the idea of the author.

Maynard replied if the gentleman thought he knew more about it than he (Maynard) did, he could read the article for his own benefit.

Eldridge said he did not think he knew more about it than the gentleman.

Maynard said there exists among a portion of the people of the South lawless bands of people placing life and property in peril and acting with a common purpose and common intent. He then advocated the passage of the bill.

Eldridge charged Maynard with having cut in two the articles from the Chattanooga Times, and then read the entire article. In substance the outcry of outrages by Ku Klux was simply a pretext to station troops in the South so as to carry the Presidential election by force for the Republican party. This could only serve to fan into life the fast expiring embers of civil strife, etc. The final remedy is cultivation of a proper public spirit which will demand the enforcement of the law. Stationing troops in the South would only aggravate the evil of which complaints is made.

At 4:30 the House adjourned.

The San Domingo report is still in the hands of the Commission and will not be sent to Congress to-day, perhaps not to-morrow. It is said it will make about fifty-five columns.

Just prior to the conclusion of Davis' remarks in the Senate to-day an incident of an unusual character occurred, which excited considerable comment in the galleries and on the floor. Representative Benjamin F. Butler, of Massachusetts, who was occupying the seat of Senator Thurman, immediately adjouning that of the Senator from Kentucky, had for some time been intensely observing Davis, as he proceeded. The latter apparently growing restive and disconcerted under the steady gaze of the Massachusetts member, and speaking with his usual warmth and earnestness, suddenly turned and faced that gentleman and continuing his Ku Klux stories said: "These fictitious charges are originated by parties to affect the coming elections. The Legislatures to be elected are to choose one-third of the members of this Senate, and it is with a view of using this political capital for these diabolical and devilish ends. The vile and slanderous stories of outrage emanate from the brains of political scoundrels and ruffians." Davis then took his seat, and observing Gen. Butler's scrutiny was continued, he wheeled his chair around so as to meet the latter's gaze, and defiantly the two gentlemen sat steadily staring or rather glaring at each other, to the amusement of the gallery, and the evident disquietude of Senators around them, who seemed to fear a personal collision might ensue. Stevenson, the colleague of Davis, had meanwhile taken the floor, but the attention of the greater part of the Senate was engrossed by the seemingly bellicose appearance of the two gentlemen who still eyed each other with no very approving glances. After a full minute spent in this way, Davis rose from his chair and addressing Butler was heard to say by Senators near him: "What do you mean by attempting to brow-beat me in that way? You are a damned scoundrel, sir!" adding after a pause: "Yes, sir! I repeat it. You are a damned scoundrel, sir!" At this juncture Wilson, in compliance with the request made to him privately by Casserly, came from his seat on the other side of the Chamber, and interposed, to prevent a continuance of the scene. Davis then resumed his seat, and Butler, after looking in another direction for a few minutes, went over to the Republican side, and shortly after left the Chamber. It is reported that when addressed by Davis, Butler replied: "I don't know you, sir, I don't care for you, and I don't want to speak to you!" It is also stated that prior to the occurrence, and while Davis was delivering his speech, Senator Bayard, sitting near him, suggested to him to free himself from Butler's scrutiny and appeal to the Vice President. Davis replied he did not need the protection of the Senate, but would take care of himself.

Thomas Booth was committed for trial to-day on a charge of causing Richmond county bonds to be illegally printed and placed in the market. He says he was acting for Thomas Slattery, who has not been arrested.

In the case of Hath & Raphael against the Erie Railway Company and others, plaintiffs made a motion in the United States District Court this afternoon for an injunction restraining defendants from issuing new stock or convertible bonds. Pending discussion, the Court in various Erie cases took papers and reserved decision.

A number of bankers yesterday presented Capt. Sampson with a watch valued at $850 for his energy in capturing the forger Van Esten.

The Brooklyn authorities have discovered that officer O'Keefe, of the sanitary squad, has been selling at auction and giving away among the poor large quantities of clothing, bedding, etc., infected with small pox, and which he was ordered to destroy. The discovery produced a great sensation in the parts of the city in which the disease still prevails.

PETROLEUM MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE MORNING HERALD, TITUSVILLE, March 30, 1871—9 P. M.

The feeling was a trifle weaker in the market to-day, though no marked difference in prices was observable.—Upon the Lower Creek $4.00 and $4.05 were the buying and selling prices among a portion of the dealers, though at the close $4.00 was the ruling figure. Upon the Upper Creek $4.00 was bid, with sales at from $4.00 to $4.05.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

Money and Stock Market.

By Telegraph.]

NEW YORK, March 30.

Gold steady and a small volume of business; opened at 110¼, closed at 110¼@110⅜.

Loans of 1@2 per cent. for carrying, and 1 per cent. for use.

Clearances about $29,000,000. At the Treasury sale bids amounted to $4,122,000 at prices ranging from 109 51-100@110 26-100, awards of $1,000,000 from 110 17-100@110 26-100.

Governments opened steady and advanced during the day from ⅛@¾ per cent with the exception of 10-40's, which were weak, and 6's of '81 and currency 6's strongest, closed firm. The new loan meeting with decided favor, is a feature in favor of its early success, is a fact that subscriptions will no longer be limited to National Banks, and some private banking houses in this city have taken hold in good earnest.

Stock market weak and feverish early in the day, but later became strong and continued so till close. Western Union was the feature which sold up to 59¾, next was Lake Shore and N Y. Central In Express stocks there were small dealings.

Money easy at 4@5 per cent.

The Post says: We have good authority for saying a combination is made up of nearly the same firm and speculators who figured in a like movement last December, has been formed to lock up money, and to-morrow operations looking to stringency will begin. Today and yesterday a large amount of stocks have been sold on account of the combination. The Treasury it is reasonable to expect, can be counted on further to lend influence in favor of ease, as stringent money would check subscriptions to the new loan. The Secretary of the Treasury will be in this city to-morrow or the day after, so that prompt action, if deemed necessary, can be had without delay.

State securities have been dull and heavy, excepting Tenn. old and new Va. bonds, which have been strong and active.

The Purest and Safest.—The efficacy of Hostetter's Celebrated Stomach Bitters as a specific for recruiting the enfeebled body and cheering the desponding mind, has passed into a proverb. In the United States, where this marvelous tonic has borne down all opposition, and eclipsed all rivalry, the demand for it annually has increased in a heavier and heavier ratio for years, until, at last, the regular sales of this preparation exceed those of all other stomachics combined. Eminent members of the medical profession and hospital surgeons without number, have candidly admitted that the pharmacopoeia of the faculty contains no prescription that produces such beneficial effects in dyspepsia, general debility and nervous diseases, as Hostetter's Bitters. To use the language of a venerable physician of New York, "The Bitters are the purest stimulant and the safest tonic we have." But the uses of the great vegetable antidote are much more comprehensive than such praises would imply. As a preparatory an idole to epidemic disease, a genial stimulant, a promoter of constitutional vigor and appetizer, a stomachic, and a remedy for nervous debility, no medicinal preparation has ever attained the reputation of Hostetter's Bitters It is the household tonic of the American people, and in all human probability will be so for centuries to come. The magnates of science recognize its merits, and that it is emphatically the medicine of the masses, is proven by its vast and ever increasing sales.

Blasting in Oil Wells.

The failures in obtaining satisfactory results in oil wells, undoubtedly arise from imperfect explosion, and this is especially the case with Nitro-Glycerine. Parties who desire a complete explosion of this material, must themselves insist on a perfect explosion being used, otherwise their money and time is utterly wasted. Remember the cartridge may be blown to pieces and rent open without effecting the explosion of the Nitro-Glycerine it contains. It is very seldom that more than one-third of the powder, or "combination," are ever exploded, and it is on this account, that when pure Nitro-Glycerine is used, if part has been exploded, the remainder must explode, that has caused such effect ve results in oil wells. Over 75 per cent, of the torpedoes put in by the undersigned in 1868 and 1869 recovered the wells to their highest yield.

MOWBRAY'S NITRO-GLYCERINE.—The Tri Nitro-Glycerine manufactured by the Mowbray process, is safer to handle, has 30 per cent more explosive force, and is a more stable compound than can be made by the Nobel process. It is chemically pure, perfectly safe, warranted less liable to accident than powder in blasting, and is so certified by B D. Frost, Chief Engineer of the Hoosac Tunnel. For three years we have manufactured thousands of pounds, and teamed it over the roughest roads in Massachusetts, Vermont, Maine, Connecticut and New York, in all seasons, without the slightest accident. Saves 50 per cent. in cost of rock blasting, seven-eights of the drilling, and expedites the work so that the removal of rock is the limit of progress. Proved to have double the force of Dualin, Dynamite, or any of the mixtures of inert matter with interior nitro-glycerines.

LOCCHIDO FUSE EXPLODERS.

The result of three years' experiments, perfectly safe, require an actual spark to explode them atmospheric electricity, friction of wire do not affect these Electric Fuse Exploders. The only fuse with wires insulated in pure gutta percha—guaranteed "sure fire" every time.

FUSE GUTTA PERCHA INSULATED WIRE.

The adulteration of gutta percha in insulated wire, intended for blasting purposes, is a crime, because it risks the miners' lives, and worse, a blunder—because it wastes valuable time by causing miss fires.

Insulated Wire, warranted, made of the pure gum, without admixture. Address

THERE was an "affair of honor" at McClintocksville the other day. The seconds were on the ground, but the principals failed to come to time, and the duel fell through.

CHURCH RUN DEVELOPMENTS.—Twenty-three new wells are going down on the McGuire farm, Church Run. Some of them will be ready for testing in a few days. The indications are good.

IN an article on the manufacture of bricks the other day, we inadvertantly stated that the price of bricks manufactured in Titusville was $15 00 per 1,000. It should have read $8 00 per 1,000.

THE Hibernicon attracted a fine audience last evening and proved a delightful exhibition. The programme comprises a panorama of Ireland, and a variety of vocal performances and original sketches of Irish character and eccentricities. The entertainment will be repeated this evening.

WORK ON STREETS.—In another column will be found the annual report of Street Commissioner Ostrom, submitted to the Common Council on Wednesday evening. The report shows very fully where and and in what manner the appropriation for street improvements has been expended during the last year, and it will be read with general interest. Mr. Ostrom has performed his responsible duties very satisfactorily.

LOST AND FOUND.—Mr. M. B. Crowe, of Corry, lost in the European Hotel, a few days since, a roll of bills amounting to forty dollars. The money was picked up by Mr. James Horrigan, and diligent search made for the loser. Yesterday Mr. C was in town and upon making known his loss to Mr. P Goodwin, the proprietor, he recovered his money and went on his way rejoicing.

"PUT UP OR SHUT UP."—The Meadville Republican says that Titusville has sent $17,000 to Harrisburg to buy the new county, the Warren Mail fixes the sum at $20,000, and the Franklin Citizen raises it to $30,000 Striking an average from these estimates, it would appear that the exact sum is $22,333 33, which we advise our opponents to "cover" without delay, or else stop surveling.

BUSINESS CHANGE.—Mr. C. J. Mueller has sold his cigar and tobacco store, on West Spring street, to Mr. James Gosline, who will continue the business, manufacturing cigars for the home market, and dealing in tobaccos, snuff, pipes and imported as well as native brands of cigars. Mr. G. is well known in this city, as former proprietor of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Boot and Shoe store, now in the hands of Mr. L Bendheim.

KLEPTOMANIA.—About four o'clock yesterday afternoon, a youth of fourteen years named John Myers, entered Mr. C. W. Mead's jewelry store, 31 Spring street, for the purpose of obtaining a watch worth about $8, which he had left there for repairs. He refused to pay for repairing the watch and it was consequently returned to the case. Myers hung about the store, and managed while no one was looking to take a gold watch valued at $65 from the conuter and put it in his boot. Mr. Mead missed the watch almost immediately, and upon searching the youth the watch was found on his person. He was taken before Justice Clark and committed.

A COSTLY STABLE.—Mr. A. H. Bronson, who recently purchased Mr. Luffkin's property at the head of Perry street, has given orders to Mr. VanUlrich, architect, to improve the property and buildings in such a manner as he may think best, and regardless of expense. The stable and coach house, the drawings, plans and specifications of which are finished, will be among the finest in the State. The rear section will be four stories and the front three stories high, with an elegant ornamental elevation. The roof will be the mansard pattern, and a ventilating turret will materially add to the beauty of the structure. This building alone will cost about $8,000

THE INCOME TAX.—Commissioner Plessanton has published an interesting decision relative to the income returns, to the effect that taxpayers who prefer not to make their returns for 1870 in detail, will be allowed to present sworn statements of the total amount of their taxable incomes, and the amount of tax at 2½ per cent. due the government thereon. As this statement is required to be subscribed under oath, it answers all practical purposes, and modifies many of the inquisitorial features of the system of assessment heretofore enforced. Since Congress has neglected to take any final action on the question of repealing this tax, Commissioner Pleasanton is doing well in modifying, as far as practicable, the objectionable and unpopular features of the law. There can be no doubt that the effect of this policy will be to facilitate the work of Assessors and Collectors in carrying out the provisions of the law, and to make all classes of the people more willing to pay what has always been the most unpopular of taxes.

A GENERAL meetings of the Home Relief Society will be held in the session room of the Presbyterian church at half past two o'clock this (Friday) afternoon. Mrs. J. H. Cogswell, Pres.; Mrs. L. H. Severance, Sec'y.

LOST—A small pocket-book containing railroad passes and papers of value to the owner. The finder will be rewarded by leaving the same at the HERALD counting room or with C. C. Leonard.

Dedication of Masonic Hall.

Last evening, according to previous announcement, the new Masonic Hall of this city was dedicated, by the forms and ceremonies established by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. In such cases when the officers of the Grand Lodge cannot be present in their official capacity, the District Deputy of that portion of the State in which the hall is located, represents, with others he may select, the Grand Lodge officers. In the present case they were as follows:

Pearson Church, acting R. W. G. M.
Chas. L. Wheeler, acting R. W. D. G. M.
James R. Barber, acting R. W. S. G. W.
J. W. Graham, acting R. W. J. G. W.
J. H. Falkinburgh, acting R. W. S. G. D.
Charles P. Hatch, acting R. W. J. G. D.
Robert Lyman, acting R. W. G. Sec'y.
H. B. Cullum, acting R. W. G. Treasurer.
Rev. W. P. Bignell, acting R. W. G. Chaplain.
John Slote, acting R. W. G. Pursv.
J. H. Cogswell, acting R. W. G. Marshal.

The attendance was very large, the capacious hall, with double rows of seats, being filled. In addition to the dedicatory services proper, speeches were made by Pearson Church, Esq., Charles L. Wheeler, Esq., and Rev. William P. Bignell. The speech of Mr. Wheeler possessed an unusual interest to all of the older members present from the retrospect he gave of the different Masonic Halls that have existed in this city showing the progress of the Order. He also spoke eloquently of the real value of true Masonic teaching and exhorted all the fraternity to prove by their every-day lives that the sublime truths of masonry governed them in all their acts.

Mr. Pearson Church passed a high compliment upon the fraternity of Titusville, claiming they have the best and most beautifully furnished lodge room in the whole State, not excepting the Grand Lodge room in Philadelphia. The whole upper story of the Savings Bank and adjoining block west is occupied by the Order as lodge room, ante rooms, banquet room and reception room.

The various branches of the Order are as follows:

Oil Creek Lodge, No. 303, A. Y. M.—J. W. Graham, W. M. Constituted December 22, 1856.

Shepherd Lodge, No 463, A. Y. M.—J. R. Barber, W. M. Constituted May 13, 1870.

Aaron Chapter, No. 207, H. R. A. M—J. R. Barber, M. E H. P. Constituted July 19, 1866.

Rose Croix Commandery, No. 49, of Knights Templar and Appendant Orders,—John Fertig, E C. Constituted March 15, 1871.

Occident Council, No 49, of R, S. E and S. Masters,—A. A. Aspinwall, T. I G. M. Constituted March 21, 1871.

All these branches of the Order are in a highly flourishing condition. This is owing not entirely to the fraternity of Titusville, but to the surrounding villages as well.

A very pleasant and unexpected part of the entertainment last evening was the presentation to Shepherd Lodge by Chas. L. Wheeler, Esq., in behalf of Mrs. C. P. Hatch, of a large, elegantly bound bible. Mr. W.'s remarks in presenting, and Mr. Barber's in accepting for the Lodge were very felicitous.

After the dedication was concluded the doors were thrown open to the invited guests, and the wives, daughters, and for aught we know, the sweethearts of some of the members, thronged the rooms. A bountiful collation was served up in the rooms of Drs. Luce, Downes & Comer, who generously turned themselves out of doors to serve the occasion. The committee of arrangements on this part of the programme are entitled to great credit. The tables were tastefully arranged and well supplied with an abundance of the choicest viands. The coffee was in fine flavor, and nothing stronger was on the tables, a notable and praiseworthy fact. Everything passed off pleasantly, making the occasion one long to be remembered in the annals of the Masonic fraternity of Titusville and vicinity.

Harrisburg Letter.

HARRISBURG, March 29, '71.

NEW COUNTY.

The annual "eruction" concerning the proposed new county of Petrolia has already commenced, and Venango county, as usual, has sent her lobby delegation to protest against such infamous legislation. One would think from the vim and intensity which characterizes their exertions, that the life, liberty and property of the good citizens of Franklin were imperiled, instead of a little patch of territory in two northern townships. But only one side of the question is heard thus far. Nobody seems to be saying anything in favor of new county, and if it were not for the raving of the newspapers of Warren, Meadville and Franklin, as well as the advent of the lobbyists against the measure, nobody would be disquieted on that account. To a looker-on it would seem as though the opponents of the measure were more scared than hurt, and were frettering away time and money to no advantage.

BORDER RAID CLAIMS.

Nearly a fortnight ago a petition was presented from five hundred citizens of Chambersburg praying for some legislation to make compensation for the extraordinary losses in property sustained by them during the late war. This petition sets forth that on July 30, 1864, an overwhelming force of the enemy, under the command of General McCausland, sacked and burned the principal portion of Chambersburg, destroying fully two-thirds of the real and personal property of the town. The people were defenceless, the six regiments of troops raised especially for border defence but short time before having been called to strengthen the Federal armies south of the Potomac. The insurances were unavailing, and very many of the people lost, with their homes, all they possessed. The petition then goes on to argue that the people of that section have contributed their full share to the common sacrifices necessary to maintain the unity of the republic; and they have borne extraordinary sacrifices, which were not shared by other sections of the State, and in very many instances these sacrifices have made them homeless and helpless. These injuries were inflicted in consequence of the withdrawal of their own defenders for the general defence, and the belief is expressed that the General Government would not hesitate to make restitution to the State. This restitution the General Government could not make to individuals, but Congress could not refuse payment to a Commonwealth which had been despoiled because her own defenders were prevented from rendering her proper service.

The petitioners do not ask the State to involve the credit or to increase taxation, but appeal to the General Assembly to make some just apportionment of their own taxes or otherwise, by which they can have some basis of credit with which to make a hopeful effort to relieve themselves and their families from embarrassment and want A special committee was appointed by the Senate to report what action, if any, should be taken in the case, and last evening the committee met to hear the arguments of Judge Black and Hon A. K. McClure in favor of the petitioners. A considerable number of persons were attracted and the room was quite crowded. The addresses were very forcible, and the committee are said to have been so favorably impressed that a bill will probably be presented to the Senate in conformity with the wishes of the petitioners

INDIAN RELIEF BILL.

The heirs of the celebrated Seneca Indian Chief are likely to receive some very beneficial legislation in the shape of a bill for a division of the lands ceded to Cornplanter by the State in 1791, for meritorious services. The tract consists of 780 acres in the vicinity of Warren. The bill authorizes the appointment by the Orphans' Court of Warren County of "three competent disinterested men, citizens of Pennsylvania, to make such partition and allotment of shares as they may think just and equitable having regard to value and the location of the improvements made by the parties interested and to pray also for the appointment of guardians for any parties being minors; and the said three men so appointed by said court shall have all the powers of commissioners or an inquest to make partition, and shall make the allotments and report their proceedings to said court and when confirmed by the said court such partition shall be and remain firm and staple forever." It also provides that these shares or allotments may be sold by the owners to any of the descendants of Cornplanter, or any member of the Seneca Nation of Indians, but not to others without the authority of the Legislature. The bill has passed the House and will probably pass Senate.

DEAD-LOCK

Appearances indicate that the present session of the Legislature will extend late into May. The Senate has 500 House bills untouched, and until the apportionment is disposed of legislation is practically suspended in the higher branch.

The charter amendment bill for your city was specially reported in the House yesterday, but a motion to suspend the rules for its passage was defeated by objections from the Democratic side. The effort will be renewed to-morrow, and if then defeated, the bill will come up on private calendar on Tuesday next

No other local legislation for Titusville has reached this point. A bill has been sent from the School Directors empowering them to borrow additional money for school purposes, but has not yet been introduced

THE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

The Governor in his last annual message urged in a very forcible manner the importance and necessity of a thorough geological survey of the State and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives some time ago reported a bill to authorize such a survey. The Legislature, however, has been too busy with other matters to give this subject the attention it deserves. Every citizen of the State is interested in having such a survey made at as early a day as possible, and all the money that is likely to be expended upon it, if it is entrusted to proper hands, will be returned a thousand fold. This is one of the very few really useful projects now before the Legislature, and we are sorry to say that for this very reason it is not likely to receive the consideration it deserves. There are enough intelligent and honest men in the Legislature, however, to appreciate the importance of a geological survey, and they should urge it as strongly as possible, and endeavor to have a bill passed authorizing it before adjournment.

Method of Resuscitation From Stroke of Lightning.

TITUSVILLE, March 30, 1871.

Editors Morning Herald

The following account of the death of J. D. Gold, by lightning, is copied from the Tidioute Journal:

On Wednesday morning, during the severe thunder storm that passed over this section, the lightning struck a derrick on the Clapp farm, following the tools, which were hanging in the derrick, and instantly killing Mr. J D. Gold, who was engaged in sand pumping at the time. The fluid entered his left temple and passed down across his body to a watch in his fob pocket on the right side, partially melting the case, and tearing the silver chain to pieces, and stopping the watch at 7½ minutes after 3 o'clock. It then passed again to his left side, and followed down that leg, tearing off his boot and sock, and into the ground near the conductor hole. Mr. Mullholland, who was at work with him, had just unscrewed the reamer and sat down on the bull wheel brake, when the stroke came. He was knocked senseless by the stroke, and upon coming too found the derrick full of smoke, the light out, and Mr. Gold's clothing on fire. He run and got a light, and called for help and extinguished the fire, when Mr. Gold was found as stated above. The deceased was a young man twenty-four years of age, and leaves a wife and one child at Demsey town. His remains were taken there on Thursday for interment. He had been on the well about a month

My friend E. E. Clapp informs me that there was no break of the skin in the track of the lightning, or lesion anywhere discoverable, and that he was supposed to be dead, and therefore no effort was made to resuscitate him.

I do not wish to say anything to give pain to the friends of the deceased, but for the good of others, the proper treatment in such cases should be known by all persons, particularly in the oil region, where the derricks are so frequently struck.

I have seen and had knowledge of a large number of cases of suspended animation from lightning, none of which have failed to recover when the proper remedy was perseveringly applied, unless fatal injury was inflicted by some solid body, such as splinters or other material thrown by the explosion of the lightning.

Several cases have occurred in my own practice, of which a very interesting one happened in Girard, Erie county, Pa., about the year 1842.

Wm. McC, after a severe thunder storm which both of us witnessed together, enquired of me "What is the best remedy to apply in case of suspended animation from lightning?" I replied that the remedy was simple and always at hand, and should in all cases be applied promptly and perseveringly, so long as a good degree of warmth remained, if relief was not obtained sooner. Water, either cold or tepid, should be applied copiously. If the person is in the open air, and a heavy shower follows the lightning, the remedy is self applied; but if a person is prostrated in a house or under a shelter, he should be dragged out into the rain, or water should be dashed on.

If I rightly recollect the time, in less than two weeks after giving these instructions the gentleman had an opportunity of practically testing their correctness, on the persons of his own mother and younger brother, who were prostrated in a severe thunder storm, while in their own house. The mother was taking off a kettle of boiling water from an old-fashioned crane, and had it barely off the end when the lightning came down the chimney, passing from the crane to the mother, prostrating her, and at the same time the son, striking him on the right parietal bone, passing down over the temple and side to the floor, its course being marked distinctly on the skin. Fortunately, William coming to the house, near enough to feel the shock, was soon there. He drew his mother out and dashed a number of pails of water over her; then doing the same by his brother, he continued dashing water on both till breathing was fully established.

I was there soon after, joined by the other physicians of Girard, four in number.

All were fully impressed with the feeling that the water saved them.

The case of the son was the most severe, he was not fully restored to consciousness for more than forty-eight hours.

All persons should know what to do in such cases, for who can tell how soon he will be called upon to apply the remedy or be the means of losing a life through his ignorance of it.

If this happens to be instrumental in saving one life I shall be amply repaid for writing it. Very truly yours,

S. S. BATES, M. D.

Stand Off City.

STAND OFF CITY, March 29, 1871.

Editors Morning Herald:

Your "special" in this city to-day interviewed Mr. W. H. Keeler, the obliging and handsome manager of the Mitchell farm, and the following items in relation to the production, developments, &c., here, as learned from him and from other sources deemed reliable, may be of interest to the HERALD'S constituency.

FIVE NEW WELLS

have been finished and tested on this farm during this month to date. Their Nos., the order in which they were put down and tested, with their production now, is as follows: No. 9, 25; No. 13, 40; No. 18, 3; No. 14, 10, and No. 10, 0, barrels per day.

The latter well has been pumped a week and torpedoed once already, but as yet the yield of oil therefrom is as above indicated. The impression is, that it will be a complete success—as a "dry hole"—the first one of that class found on the farm. These five wells are located on the border leases along the "R. L. Shaw reserve" and extending from the pike to the Tolle's farm.

FIVE MORE WELLS ARE GOING DOWN AT PRESENT, upon some of which the work of drilling is at an advanced stage of completion. The are Mitchell's Nos. 8, 12, 17, 20 and 21.

Mr. D. Morton has the contract of drilling the latter three, and they are down 500, 200 and 100 feet each respectively. No. 8 is about forty feet in the "third sand" now, and is making a fine show. It will be tested by the latter part of this week if no mishaps take place. Rieneman, the contractor, has already lost three weeks time by tools being "stuck" in the "second sand." The well is located on the lease adjoining No. 7, which for the past four months has been the largest producing well in the Rouseville district.

Gealy & Bradshaw are drilling No. 12, and when they had it within a few feet of being completed, "tools stuck." Messrs. Gealy & Bradshaw are among our most experienced and successful drillers, but in spite of their utmost efforts for the past three weeks they have been unable as yet to remove the tools. The well being over one thousand feet in depth causes the job to be one of great difficulty. The "iron pole" tools are to be tried, and its is hoped will result successfully.

There are four new rigs up ready for drillers, and as other wells are finished work will be commenced on them. Mitchell has his farm now surrounded with a circle of wells on the outside leases, and can come down on the enclosed territory at his leisure, and compel it to surrender its greasy treasures at discretion.

THE PRODUCTION OF THE OLD WELLS

on the farm (that is wells down before the first of January) have, with a single exception, become really light, as compared with their yield three or four months ago. The average daily production of the farm at that time was nearly 700 barrels, while that of last month was something over 350, and that of the present month will be, in consequence of recent strikes, about 400 or 425 per day.

The following is about the production of the different wells at present. The new wells named at the beginning of this article are not included here:

F. W. MITCHELL & CO'S WELLS

Nos. 14 and 5 are doing 3 and 5 barrels; Nos. 1, 2, 6, 10, 11, 15 and 16 are going from 6 to 10 barrels each per day, while No. 3 is yet doing 75, and No. 7, 85 barrels.

No. 3 was struck a year ago, and has already produced closely on 25,000 barrels of oil.

No. 7 was struck in December, and previous to being torpedoed produced only 10 barrels, but after being torpedoed, began pumping 175 barrels per day, and has within the past four months, produced 17,000 barrels.

The wells enumerated in above as Nos. 15 and 16 were formerly known as the Keeler and Carpenter wells, and the No. 11 was formerly owned by F. S. Tarbell, & Co, but interests of former owners were purchased by F. W. M. & Co, several month since.

ELY AND ANDREWS'

four wells, located on leases, 2, 4, 11, and 16, are all together, doing less than 50 barrels per day.

Their well on lease 4 has been the most prolific well on the farm, thus far, having yielded twenty-five thousand barrels of oil already, and the one on lease 16 has done about half that amount.

THE GEALY WELLS, NOW OWNED BY DEMING & CO, and which for a time were among the best have decreased to about 10 barrels each per day.

THE GEORGE BROTHERS.

No 1 well is down to fifteen barrels, and their No. 2 ten barrels per day. Their No. 1 well has pumped eleven thousand barrels of oil since it was struck in May last.

VARIOUS ITEMS

The new Richardson "Sand Pump Reel" is being thoroughly tested here, and since the metal castings thereof have been improved and increased in strength, it works admirably and supplies a want which has always existed in connection with all "oil well rigs." The Reel is coming into use here rapidly, to the entire exclusion of the old style of "Reels," which have been the cause of more hard swearing by drillers than any other part of the rig, and its general adoption should be urged on the ground that it would do away with considerable "cussing." The other points in which the new excels the old Reel are too many to enumerate here, but a moment's inspection by an operator will make its superiority apparent to him. Its cost will be about twenty-five dollars, all complete.

The inventor of the above has also invented a small casting called a "thimble guide," the value of which and its adaptation to the purpose for which it was designed, will be duly appreciated by all who have the immediate management of oil wells. The "thimble guide" is made to fit into the casing at the mouth of the well, and its use effectually prevents damages or accidents resulting from the frequent catching or striking of the thimbles on the casing, when letting the tubing into the well. Mr. Richardson's manufactory is at Shorman, but he supplies the operators at all points in the oil regions.

Higgins & Bro. are now putting up a fine office for the manager of the Mitchell farm, in which he can "spread himself" in all his official dignity. Yours, &c.

Chief Engineer Damrell, of Boston, reports that 30 per cent. of the fires in American cities are caused by the deposit of ashes in wooden boxes or barrels.

A Boston shoe dealer has been delighted by the receipt of an order for shoes for the family of a Mormon Bishop at Salt Lake—twenty wives and about fifty children.

A pet goat, belonging to an Irishman in Macon, Ga., ate up $70 in greenbacks which he found in an open trunk in his master's room. The Irishman gave the goat a sound beating and dosed him with castor oil, but didn't get back his money.

Barthold Auerbach writes from Strasburg to a friend in Dresden: "Believe me, my friend, under German rule Strasbourg will, in less than five years, be more populous and prosperous than it ever was while it belonged to France."

A North Carolina paper, referring to an execution in its vicinity says: "Much credit is due to our Sheriff, and to Mr. Marden, the executioner, for the neat and dexterous manner in which their unpleasant duties were performed."

The Richmond (Va.) Dispatch says that the work of cutting out and deepening Butler's canal across Dutch Gap has fairly commenced. The contractor who has taken the work obligates himself to finish it in ninety days. This will shorten the distance to Norfolk by river about seven miles.

Mayor Cobb, of Lynchburg, Va., before whom several negroes claimed the ownership of a dog, left the decision of the doubtful matter to the dog himself. Several of them called the intelligent animal pathetically, but he regarded them not; finally, one yelled out Buster, and, with a bark of joy, the dog rushed toward him, and decided the matter.

Among the ridiculous petitions laid before the French National Assembly at Bordeaux is one signed by over two thousand persons, and in which the Assembly is requested to pass without delay a law prohibiting the teaching of the German language and the circulation of German journals in France.

A Kentucky paper, the Maysville Republican, has kept, from day to day, a record of the murders committed in the State since January 1, and in the last issue the count has risen to 32. It is said that not a single conviction has taken place, that in half the cases no arrests have been made.

THE DIAMOND GLASSES,

J. E. SPENCER & CO., N. Y.,

WHICH ARE NOW OFFERED TO the public, are pronounced by all the celebrated Opticians of the world, to be the Most Perfect Natural, Artificial help to the human eye ever known. They are ground under their own supervision from minute Crystal Pebbles, melted together, and derive their name "Diamond," on account of their hardness and brilliancy. THE SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLE on which they are constructed keeps the core or center of the lens directly in front of the eye, producing a clear and distinct vision, as is the natural, healthy sight, and preventing all unpleasant sensations, such as flickering and waveries of sight, dizziness, etc., peculiar to all others in use. They are Mounted in the Best Manner, in frames of the best quality, of all sizes suited for that purpose. Their Finish and Durability cannot be surpassed.

CAUTION—None genuine unless bearing their trade mark stamped on every frame.

H. HILL

Is on the ice question again this season, and succeeded in putting up

Seven Hundred Tons of Ice

Not figures, but ice, and intends not to be undersold. Spring ice will be sold from three-fourths to one cent per pound; Creek ice from forty to fifty cents per one hundred pounds. Parties wishing ice by the ton will be supplied at liberal rates. I will deliver ice now at any time that parties desire it. All persons commencing with me the first of the season will be carried through if there is any ice to be had this side of Buffalo. As this is supposed to be a free country, I have taken this method to inform the public that I have the ice. It is now for them to select the man to furnish them. This thing of drumming and harassing a man at every point and corner to take ice is an insult to a free man and an outrage to humanity. Office first door east of L. F. Scoville's grocery store, and west of the Catholic Church on Spring street.

Orders for ice left at H. A. Hill's boot and shoe store, opposite the American Hotel, will be promptly attended to, if written on the slate furnished there. mch10-tf

SUCKER-ROD JOINTS.

Explanation of Cuts.

No. 1—. represents the Joint complete. No. 2—A longitudinal sectional view of a full Joint, showing the position of the wood in the socket when wedged, a glance at which must convince the most skeptical of the superiority of this Joint over any other. No. 3—A view of the end of the Rod, when turned ready for the Socket to be driven on, with the slot for the wedge and the wedge about being entered. No. 4—Represents the end of the wood, and shows the proper way to saw the slot (across the grain) into which the wedge is to be driven.

The above description and accompanying cuts, will enable any skilled person to make connection at the wells in a much shorter time than can be done with any other Rod, all the tools required being a small fine saw, one of our hollow augers and a few of our wedges. The wedges can be procured at any hardware store, gratis.
